He has made this world a better place, lived with no regrets and loved harder than most dream of. He will forever be a part of and influence all the hearts and lives he has touched.

Survivors include his wife, Jean Lane; his stepson, Willie Bond, both of Malvern, Arkansas and his fur babies.

“ I am proud to say that Wally was my friend! We met back when I was 14 at high school. We were for separated many years, by miles and just losing track. I was so blessed to have him come back into my life just 3 years ago. I am also so thankful we made that connection again. Wally was the kind of person that called it like he saw it. He was a friend through and through, and never did anything halfway. You knew if you were messing up he would do his best to get you back on the straight and narrow, and this was done out of love. He was always a true friend! This has been the hardest loss for me so far, and I miss him every single day. I am very very sorry for your loss!

“ Uncle Wally was an amazing, caring, wonderful person and will be extremely missed. He was always there to listen no matter if it was day or night, nor did it matter what time it was. He will always be with us and watching over us. We love you Uncle Wally!!!!
