“ Heinz and Hilga sold a house on Lakeshore Dr to my wife and me in the 90s.

The realtor told me he was a cranky German and not to say anything to him or he might walk away from the sale. So that really put a challenge to me.

These were the days when all parties to the real estate transaction showed up at the same time for the closing.

We were all sitting in the lobby waiting and I introduced myself to Heinz. We chatted a moment and then I asked him what life was like in Germany during WW 2. I asked him if he served in the military. I got so many interesting looks from the various people in the room The realtors were like looking horrified.

Heinz expression was almost one of I am glad you asked. His reply was I was only 14 and not in the military. You Americans would bomb the hell out of us at night and my buddies and I, all kids, would spend the day putting out the fires. That went on for months. That was a real ice breaker conversation and Heinz and I became friends. I stopped by the Alpine Inn many times to visit with him. He was a really nice guy ! Luther Lewis
