“ Thank you everyone who came (and thank you for your prayers for those who couldn't, we know that you would have been there if you could have).

Also a big thank you for all the support from everyone. The flowers, cards, hugs, food, phone calls, etc.... We are truly blessed to have you in our lives.

These were the two most influential men in my life. I never thought at my age, I would have lost these great men.

Their memories will live on through the lessons they taught me: they taught me how to not only be a man, but to be a Godly man; how to fix things around the house and my car (more than most, my Pappaw was an electrician and also worked with mechanics); how to admit when you're wrong (and it's okay to admit it); how to apologize; how to be a gentleman; how to properly that eat a lady; how to have a Godly marriage; how to be a leader; and, showing emotions does not make you less of a man, nay, it makes you more of a true man.

In the past 1 year and 5 months I have lost the two most influential men in my life. I never thought at my young age I'd be with my Daddy and Pappaw. They taught me so much. Their memories will live on through the essays they have taught me. They taught me: how to be a Godly man, that it is okay to admit when you're wrong, to appologize, a hard work ethic, to never give up, and kindness and showing emotions does not make you less of a man, nay, it makes you more of a man.

I love them both and will miss them dearly.

“ The first time I met the Broberg Family I was dating their nephew, Ron Riddle. From the instant I met them I felt like I had known them all my life. My favorite saying from them to me was "You are so special". He was a kindhearted Christian man. He will truly be missed.

“ My Pappaw taught me so many things. He taught me how to do crossword puzzles, taught me how to do home maintenance (electrical and plumbing), but most importantly he taught me how to be a godly man, by being an example and living what he taught.
