“ When Josh was about 3, Pat said, “Josh, sing your Christmas song.” He sang, “All the boys in door-land (toy land) will have a booba-leeba(jubilee) all around the Christmas tree.” Pat and Rick thought he was the cutest little thing and we did too. He was a special and sensitive and loving child and I’m sure that carried through to adulthood. Glad to have known you, Joshua Michael Hendrix.

“ On behalf of Tyson Foods of Pine Bluff AR, we extend our sincere condolences to the family. Joshua was a great team member who worked hard for the company. I knew him personally during the past few months in the most trying times of his life. We pray your family receives comfort from the presence of God.

“ Joshua and I were for a very long while thick as thieves. We spent day and night together along with our friend Amy.

The very first time I met Josh was at a dance that I couldn't dance at because I had a brand new infant that I refused to put down even for a second. He being him said he would hold the little lady so I could dance for a minute. I did not let him out of my sight but did let him hold her. I only made it through half a dance but even then I could see that he loved children.

And then, the first time I ever really spent time with him I had made some sparkler bombs because back then in dealing with hurt I was pretty destructive. But like anybody doing anything a little crazy I didn't want to do it by myself and....I wanted someone to film it while I blew some stuff up. Josh was gung-ho to do it partly because it sounded fun and partly because he saw that I was hurting and wanted to help.

We had seen each other around some places our friends hung out but never had spent much time together. But that day he and one other person was there when I pulled up. And without hesitation he saw that I need someone and hopped in and also convinced the other guy that it would be fun and to come along as well.

I won't share the details and also realize that it might be over sharing and incriminating. But, I think it shows who Josh was exactly. He was down to have a great time but even more so that he was willing to help anybody in need to the point of his own detriment. That echoed through his life and our three amigos friendship.

That day we became inseparable and soon after he demanded that I call him "Bubba" and he called me "Mama" because I had a toddler and a new born running around. Later I would go on to have one million more and he was right there every time.

We were together in amazingly great moments and tremendously devastating ones.

I send my love to all of his family. May Bubba find peace in the afterlife. May he allow himself to feel loved. May God take his pain so he can see love in all it's greatness. May his heart rest and be whole.

“ I have so many great memories in the past 14 years that sharing one is difficult. I will share my first and last. My first was of this smiling young man leading a line of me into our church. He was so young to be leading this motley crew, I had to meet him. He told me then, God said he was a leader and everyone needed the opportunity to know Jesus. My last was when my 12 year old 4 legged friend passed and I wanted to bury her under a pink dogwood, everyone was sold out even online, Joshua went to every nursery and finally found one, it was quite pricey, but he told the story of our friendship and somehow managed to deliver that tree to my house, I will now have two reasons to smile when it blooms. I loved that young man and know, we saw his amazing heart!
