“ to whom it may concern:I drove by today during visitation multiple times, but decided today was not the day.. I was along with my mother the first and ONLY person willing to stop and help this man.. I was first on the scene..I don't even live in the area..but it saddened me to hear he passed. I did all I could and comforted him until help arrived. I am sorry for your loss, as i said, today was a day for grieving not about "that day".. I can say it profoundly changed my life forever..I kept reassuring him he was going to be ok, I'm sorry more was not done, I did and would again stop to help.. i'm just sorry more could not be done.. He was not scared, only concern was his family..feel free to email me
