“ *Bucky, Whit, and Shelta,
I am so sad to hear this news. Sandy and Rodney were the most thoughtful and pleasant couple I ever knew! Your family was so loving to each other and friends. Sandy was the perfect balance for Rodney's great wit! She had a gentle, nurturing spirit that I'll never forget. My heart aches for your loss. I was fortunate to share many happy memories with your parents and will always treasure them as some of my happiest!*

“ Family, you are in my thoughts and prayers. Sandy was such a sweet lady and will be dearly missed by all. I remember seeing her at Whitney's, Alex's, and Liam's events, I would always say hi grandma Sandy, because that is what Whitney called her, she would always smile and ask how I was doing. She was a great hostess and I was honored to be acquainted with her.

“ Condolences on the loss of such a vibrant woman. May she rest in peace, and her family find solice now that she is in a better place. Here is an original poem written for her and her family:

THE LONGEST SEASON

*As a day turns to dusk,
Dusk darkens to night,
The sands of time forever flow,
And as the sun kisses the horizon,
Life begins anew.*

*The season of life forever changes,
From a tiny sprig,
Into a mighty giant,
Then back to the earth to begin again.*

*We grow with each season,
New and old wonders abound,
And should we be a fortunate soul,
We can see the season unfold.
Those who love will ultimately experience loss, and it is the memory which carries us to the spring again.*

For love is ageless, without bounds, and is the beating heart of the longest and most wonderful season of man.

“ "Bucky" and Whitley, just wanted you to know that I'm thinking of you during your time of grief after the loss of your mother. Remember that God is in control of times like this and time will make things better for you both. Love you both!! Coach Wagner

“ We had the great pleasure of knowing Sandra through our close relationship with her son, Whit. To Whit, Sandra was not mother, mom, or any other, but "Momma." Although our relationship with Sandra was one through her son mainly, I feel confident that I can talk about the superabundance of things that she did to assist and make family, "family,' in Whit and Grayson's life.

The thing that comes to mind so blatantly to me is her pure, self-sacrificing love for her family. Sandra was always such an integral, caring, core component of their family. She DID for everyone. Particularly, she loved to pieces Grayson, and did everything to show this.

Whit had a myriad of friends, to put it mildly. And, Whit's Momma was caring and kind to everyone, including our entire bunch and then some.

They say you never know what you've got until it's gone, but I truly believe that Whit knew how estimable and wonderful she was all along. He knew how wonderful his momma was, and he took care to show her this, from beginning to her fighting end.

Now, that fighting has come to an end; but the end is not an end, but rather a beginning, to a beautiful new life....a new life in the realm of divine perfection where Sandra will be in the presence of God, "where they behold Him in all His glory face to face, a place where the curse of sin and all of its effects have been removed forever from all who dwell there; they, being made joint heirs with Christ, inherit all things and live with unmixed joy in a state of perfect happiness incapable of being described or exaggerated forever and ever."
