“ I remember going to memes hoping you were gonna be there so I had a girl to play with, I remember fighting with you over which one of us got to be the pink power ranger and which one had to be yellow, I remember playing candyland and hi ho cherrio and hardly ever making it through a game because we could never agree on anything! Lol.. I remember becoming teenagers and sneaking out together to parties we would have never been allowed to go to! I remember the day you told me you were pregnant with Candace and I remember the smile on your face, I remember timing and writing down every contraction when you went into labor and I remember how strong you were when the had to send her to children's and I remember what a great mother you were to all you children. You were the sister I never had and I never imagined going through this life without you... You were so beautiful and so special to me! Words can't express how much I miss you! We were supposed to grow old together and both wind up with the crazy woman gene that dad always talks about! I pray you watch over me while I do it alone! I love you teffy!!
